Ninja turtles toys 1990

Image is notColor: eBayVintage Ninja Turtles May 1984, a self-published comic about an unlikely group of martial arts heroes laid the foundation for what would become a massive, media-spanning franchise. Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles #1 was in the minds of Kevin Eastman and Peter Laird. The modest black-and-white publication was published on a limited basis – 3 250 copies financed by funds from tax refunds and an uncle's loan. The book was announced as a single-issue parody of established (and popular) comics like Marvel's Daredevil and The New Mutants and DC's Ronin. RELATED: Masters of Your Bank Account: The 15 Most Expensive He-Man Toys Ever Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles uniqueness (and little print runs) quickly led to the book becoming a sensation in the comic book scene. 1986 Turtles were adapted for a small display of cartoons. Playmates Toys soon signed up as an associated producer and created an action line based on Donatello, Leonardo, Michelangelo and Raphael. Since 1988, many numbers have been made, making TMNT one of the most successful in toylines history. Many previous numbers are highly preferred by collectors now, so we have come out of our very handy shell to create cbr readers for this list of the 15 most valuable Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtle toys. 15 MOVIE STAR SUPER SHREDDER (1991) 1991 Fans of the turtle entertainment franchise saw the release of the long-awaited film Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles II: The Secret of the Ooze. Super Shredder (also known as Movie Star Super Shredder) has been an action number release based on this villain's super cool look in the movie. There were also two rare Super Shredder variants: the first featured a black body, which was available only during a promotional campaign by post with Chef Boyardee, and another with purple armor, which was only available in Europe. The TMNT Super Shredder figure came in a range of blisters packed with cool accessories, including Shredder Communicator, Sinister Spiked staff, shredded studded belt and two mini Ooze Cannisters. Representing the most affordable number on this list, MOC (mint card) Super Shredder recently sold at auction for a low, low price of $250. 14 BEBOP (1988) The Powerhouse Punk Enforcer for Foot Clan known as Bebop was the third of four different villains released in 1988 as the action of the original Playmate Toys Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles action figure. As henchman serves under the evil shredder and his Foot Clan, Bebop was third in the team after Rocksteady, his troublesome partner in the offense. Despite being a bad guy, Bebop's punk rock fashion aesthetic - complete with tattoos, mohawk hairstyles, baby blue shades and high top sneakers - helped make him a favorite among young fans. Bebop's no frills accessories include turtle shell drill, garbage can shield, and knife; those turtle shells wear bebop as shoulder pads look how the weapons of choice of this punk rock villain were used. At auction today mint condition Bebop still owns its original packaging costing the TMNT collector about $295 bucks. 13 FOOT SOLDIER (1988) Teen mutant Ninja Turtles in the world, the (fancy) Foot Clan is recognized by the most famous ninja clan throughout Japan. The leader of the foot clan is Oroku Saki, otherwise known to his enemies as Shredder. And to help out shredder diabolical schemes is an endless army of faceless Foot Soldiers. Originally made up of human follower shredders, Foot Soldiers now consists of robotic androids. Playmates releases have always had a generous range of accessories, and in 1988 the Foot Soldier count did not go down. Included in the blisters were Electro-Shock Mace, Turtle Shell Biter, Turtle Carver Knife and Arms Stand. Today, the mint condition foot soldier number still closed in its original blister pack will cost the TMNT collector up to $325. 12 DONATELLO (1988) Here's an interesting factoid: When turtles were first created in a black and white comic book in which they debuted, they all wore black masks over their eyes. In the original book, the different weapons that each carried helped to separate from each other. When turtles were licensed for mass consumption by children like Saturday morning toons, action figures, and color comic series from Archie Comics, the bandanas were changed to primary colors to make it easier for children to distinguish them. Distinguished by a purple mask with matching knees, bo staff, and the letter D on his belt is the creative genius of Team Donatello. He's the first of his teammates to make the most valuable Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtle toy list and he is valuable. A recent auction in 1988 of Donatello's figure sold for $325 in greenbacks. 11 30TH ANNIVERSARY CARTOON BOX Celebrate the 30-year animated adventure of each favorite heroes in the half shell, Neca Toys made stars at San Diego Comic-Con with an exclusive limited edition collector set with a carrying event. This absolutely amazing assortment boasts 8 action figures (Donatello, Leonardo, Michelangelo, Raphael, Shredder, Krang with Bubble Walker and 2 Foot Soldiers) and a ridiculously cool number of accessories, all packed in two different figured trays in a vinyl carrying case. The collector's case itself boasts original illustrations by Archie Comics Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles Adventures artist, Ken Mitchroney. Produced in a limited edition of 5,000 sets, Neca Toys 2017 Comic-Con's exclusive 30-year-old cartoon box was originally released with a retail price of $200, stealing, according to everything this case has. However, they usually go higher in the secondary market. At the time of this writing, the kit recently sold for $330. 10 MICHELANGELO (1988) Here's another interesting factoid: 1984, when #1 the #1 of Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles was published in 1984 the heroes of the book were misspelled. Mikeangelo (aka Mikey) was originally mistaken for Michaelangelo by Peter Laird and Kevin Eastman. In addition, Laird also revealed that the reason why turtles have names based on Renaissance artists - rather than monikers from the Rising Sun Earth - was that the duo could not come up with compelling Japanese names. Ninja turtle of any other name is still a martial arts butt kicker, and punching its way into the #10 spot on this list are Michelangelo, wearer of orange masks and skillful wielder matching nunchucks. Recently auctioned, 1988 Michelangelo's figure sold for $350, which looks like something that would give Mickey a reason to say his Southern California accent: Country, dude! 9 LEONARDO (1988) Kicking his way into #9 spot on this list of the 15 most valuable Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtle toys by Leonardo, Master Splinter, Star Apprentice and Battle Commander Turtles. Leo wears a blue mask with matching knee and his identification weapons of choice include Katana Blades, Turtle Fist Dagger, Ninja Stars, and Kama. As you can probably tell from the picture above, Leonardo is a turtle on a mission when it comes to kicking a bad guy's ass. No matter how dangerous the situation reads the back of your blisters, Leo does not mind sticking his neck. His main goal in life: reduce the shredder to size! As previously discussed by Michelangelo, in 1988 Leonardo's figure is still sealed in the original package, and recently auctioned for $350. 8 RAPHAEL (1988) When creators Kevin Eastman and Peter Laird's Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles #1 debuted in 1984 (with a limited original font run of 3,000 copies), the book was sold at a cover price of $1.50 a copy. After three decades, mint condition copies of this highly desirable comic is actually worth about 2,000 times its cover price, making TMNT #1 the most valuable posted in the 80's – by any publisher. Despite being produced in large quantities, as already shown with previous records, TMNT action figures also command quite a penny of toys still sealed in their original packaging. Although they are not valued 2,000 times their original SRP (suggested retail price), figures such as the 1988 Raphael are worth 80 times their original $4.99 SRP. At a recent auction, minty fresh Raphael sold for $395 smackerns. 7 CEREBRAL (KRANG) Since 1988 Playmates Toys was responsible for the lion's share of Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles action figures and related accessories released into the toy market. To this day, the company remains the original producer of turtle-related toys, but other companies have also begun offering interpretations of their own characters from the colorful catalogue of TMNT characters. One of the first such permits was the 2015 NT-01 Cerebral (Krang) number from First Gokin, a 3rd country toy maker that specializes in high-end action figures. what fans might expect from the First Gokin NT line of Ninja Turtle homage figures. Cerebral is an impressive interpretation of a cyborg exo-suit piloted by brain-sized mutant Krang (one of the most memorable villains from TMNT cartoons). The figure features an extraordinarily detailed design and a rich color scheme program that justifies the $400 price range in which this figure is currently on sale. 6 SHOGUN SHOATE (1994) Described in its blisters as metallic mad shogun mauler, 1994's Shogun Shoate was one of dozens or so late introductions to the TMNT toylines. Thanks to this tail final entry, buyers will ignore this figure at the time of initial release. But in recent years, Shoate's star has risen dramatically (under the Law on Supply and Demand), and this figure today is at the top of many toy collectors most sought. Along with the muscular, mutated and madly hardened shoate, came the Metallized Shogun Accessories range. These include Reptilian Metallized Battle Armor, Dragon-headed double-dose axe, Slithery Sharp Snake Slicer, and Long Lizard Blade. Today a fully accessorized Shogun Shoate action figure in the MOC (mint card) condition sells for about $420 dollars at auction. 5 ROCKSTEADY (1988) What wudda thunk that turtles best known villains, would it be rocksteady rather than shredder in the top five of the most valuable Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtle toys? This mutant, G. I. Mauler, is a partner of Shredder #1 Thug and a long-time partner of Bebop. Along with the aforementioned baddies and grunt level foot soldier, Rocksteady helped form the first wave of malevolent forces in the TMNT toylines. And if his placement here is any indication, he may even be the most popular! Packed with 1988 Rocksteady were several accessories, including a well cover panel, his Retro-Mutogen Gun, and a slightly brutal-sounding Turtle Carver Knife - which probably explains the origins of the two turtle heads that dangle on both sides of his belt! (See: Turtle soup) Mint condition Rocksteady's original packaging sells in a price range of $495. 4 HOTSPOT (1993) TMNT toylines's Firefightin dalmation Hot Spot was one of the last numbers that had to be put before the original series reached its end. Hot Spot was released in 1993, along with others now highly sought after by TMNT toys like Scratch The Cat, Robotic Bebop and Robotic Rocksteady, Sandstorm, Half Court, and Mona Lisa. And included in the blister pack along with Spot were several firefighting supplies, including the Squirtin Fire Hydrant and Hot Hose, Foot Fightin Fire Axe, and anti-gaggin gas mask. As you would expect, due to its relative rarity today the Hot Spot figure is one of the hottest TMNT toy franchises. Even from the packaging, this particular figure usually sells for a couple hundred bucks pop. And mint on the card hotspot recently sold at auction for $574, proving beyond doubt This puppy is one hot dog. 3 SIXTH SCALE BEBOP & ROCKSTEADY Fall of 2017 brings amazing release of several officially licensed sixth-scale scale figures from Sideshow and their partner Threezero. Among the releases of the first of these stars are TMNT villains Bebop and Rocksteady, as they both appeared in the 2016 film Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles: Out of the Shadows. Both Bebop and Rocksteady figurines boast new sculptural bodies with incredibly detailed heads and skin textures, realistic paint application, removable accessories, faux leather clothing and more than 25-point articulation. As a brand new collectible that carry the rich, three-decade-old legacy of TMNT toys, Sideshow and Threezero's Out of the Shadows Bebop and Rocksteady launches Teenage Mutant Ninja figures to a new and unparalleled level. Such figures are just the most serious turtle collectors, and bebop and rocksteady figures recently sold at an online auction for a set of $600 smackerns. 2 UNDERCOVER RAPHAEL (1994) #2 spot the most valuable Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtle toys are 1994's Undercover Raphael. This sewer snooping sleeve came dressed in a fedora and a real fabric trench coat! In addition to removable fabric coat, this Care Spy Turtle technician has also been packed with the following spy accessories: Secret Mutant Movie Camera, Infrared Googie Glasses, Super Sensitive Eaves-droppin dish, Surveillance Spy Case, Private Eye Pistol, and Nifty Ninja Spy Sais. Unlike the 1990 surge, which offered only Donatello as an undercover agent (dressed in a plastic fedora and shaped trench coat), all four turtles were fitted with a series of fedoras and fabric coats in '94, and packed with their respective detective gadgets. Each of the figures sells for quite a cent at auction as well, but Raphael is currently the most valuable. The mint state figure in the original package recently sold for $700. 1 SCRATCH THE CAT (1993) What's black and white and appreciated all over? If you said 1993's Scratch the Cat action figure, you're right on the money. And if you're a TMNT collector who wants to have a scratch in your collection, be prepared to spend a stack of beautiful greenbacks. This mutant cat hacking landed in a striped jailbird uniform was one of the last figures produced when the original TMNT toylines came to an end. Due to its relative rarity, it has since become the most appreciated figure in ninja turtle toy history. Even out of the pack, this figure sells for a couple hundred bucks, but the mint condition scratch on the original card goes up to $1,200. If you want to see those other collectors in that TMNT Facebook group you are yell out cowabunga, mint on the card Scratch Cat would be the final expression of the power of your bank account turtle.
